When a man wakes to find his kitchen in ruins, he sets up cameras to catch the culprit, only to discover a shocking truth about himself.

SYNOPSIS

Joe is an ordinary man with an extraordinary problem: every night, he wakes up starving, only to find his fridge completely empty. One morning, however, he stumbles into his kitchen to find it in ruins. Groceries scattered everywhere, food half-cooked, and meals mysteriously prepared. Determined to uncover the culprit, Joe installs a camera, only to discover the shocking truth: he's been sleepwalking, shopping, and cooking elaborate midnight feasts all along.

Abdulmalik Bukhari

Abdulmalik Bukhari is an emerging filmmaker and 3D animator currently pursuing a degree in 3D animation at Pratt Institute. With a passion for storytelling and a commitment to crafting visually compelling narratives, Bukhari draws inspiration from everyday moments and transforms them into imaginative and meaningful films.

Bukhari honed their animation skills through both academic and professional experiences, including an internship at a post-production company, where they contributed to pre-visualization for high-profile projects.

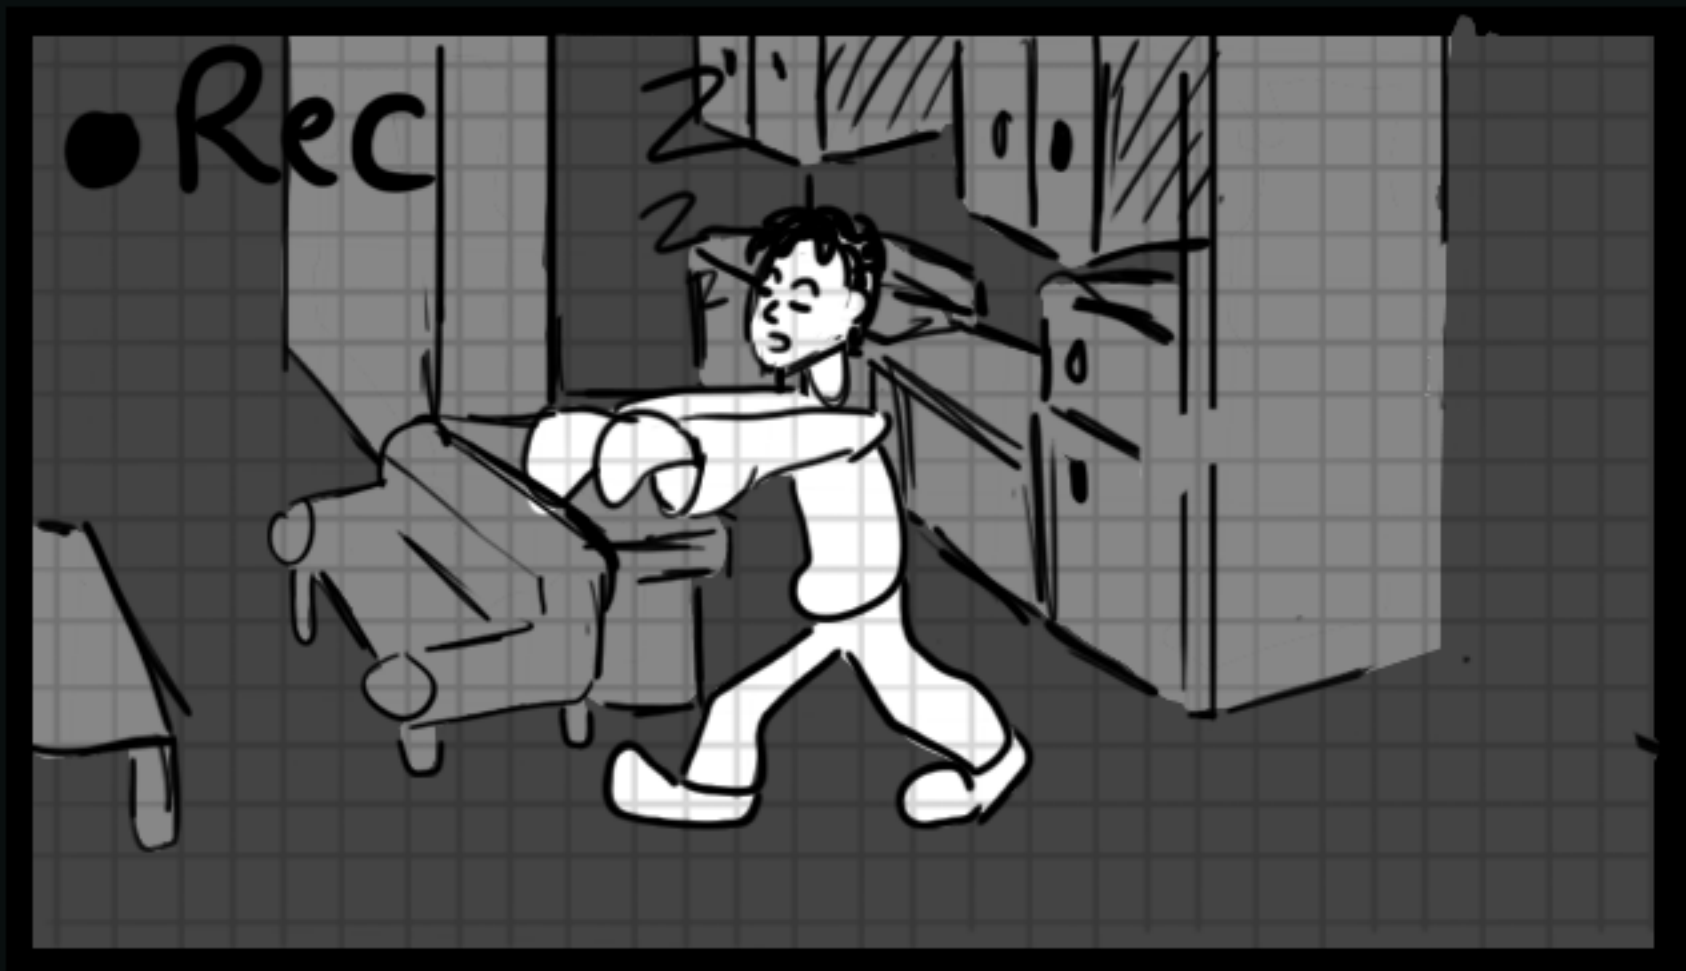

Their artistic journey also includes completing a pre-college program at Ringling College of Art and Design, where they explored animation, motion design, and various aspects of visual storytelling.
